the Defender®
CHILDREN'S HEALTH DEFENSE NEWS & VIEWS

Million $ Match! Donate Now to Maximize Your Impact!

02/29/24 • VIEWS

State Officials Raid Amish Farmer, Seize $100K of Food

Pennsylvania authorities raided Amish farmer Amos Miller's farm in January, seizing $100,000 worth of food products over allegations his raw dairy products caused E. coli outbreaks in Michigan and New York. Miller's lawyer called the sudden raid "patently illegal" and a violation of state rules.

By Dr. Joseph Mercola

90

PRODUCT UNDER DETENTION O
Not to be moved or used without authorization of the PA. DEPT. of AGRICU

Miss a day, miss a lot. Subscribe to The Defender's Top News of the Day. It's free.

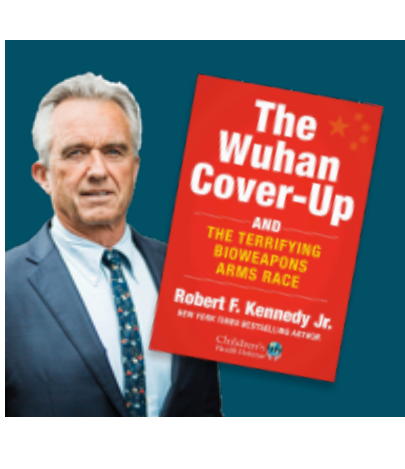
Story at a glance:

- Amish farmer Amos Miller, owner of Miller's Organic Farm in Bird in Hand, Pennsylvania, offers traditional, nutrient-dense food to his community via a private membership association.
- In January, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture raided Miller's farm, searching for raw dairy products and placing wholesome foods ranging from pickled beets and maple syrup "under detention."
- According to local food activist Max Kane, the officials detained about $100,000 worth of food.
- Miller's traditional farming practices have been under scrutiny by regulators for close to a decade.

The Amish live life much the way it was 300 years ago, and this includes producing the majority of their own food.

Amish farmer Amos Miller, owner of Miller's Organic Farm in Bird in Hand, Pennsylvania, also offers traditional, nutrient-dense food to others in his community via a private membership association.



The Wuhan Cover-Up
AND THE TERRIFYING BIOWEAPONS ARMS RACE
Robert F. Kennedy Jr.

"The Wuhan Cover-Up"
by Robert F. Kennedy Jr.
ORDER NOW

Thousands of customers depend on Miller's farm-fresh food, but they may soon be left empty-handed.

Miller's traditional farming practices have been under scrutiny by regulators for close to a decade, and in January, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture raided Miller's farm, searching for raw dairy products and placing wholesome foods ranging from pickled beets and maple syrup "under detention."

According to local food activist Max Kane, the officials detained about $100,000 worth of food.

Inside Amos Miller's Cooler - TENS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLAR...
Share
UCT UNDER DETENTION ORDE
Not to be mov used without ization of the P PT. of AGRICULTURE
Watch on YouTube

Why are they going after an Amish farmer?

On its website, Miller's Organic Farm states it offers traditional Amish farm foods, shipped to your table.

In an era where fresh, pure food is hard to come by, it's a service that appeals to many health-conscious consumers.

Members have access to "100% raw grass-fed and finished milk and dairy products, pastured meats and eggs, and other unadulterated, nutrient-dense foods, grown on our farm and other surrounding Amish farms."

Further, they state:

> "All of our suppliers have the highest standards of product quality. Our purpose is to provide real farm fresh, nutrient-dense, great tasting, beyond organic, non-GMO [genetically modified organism], chemical-free, hormone-free, and antibiotic-free foods employing traditional farming methods."

Problems began in 2015 when Miller came under scrutiny from federal officials at the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

The Food Safety Network prominently featured Miller's situation, dedicating significant coverage to the issues faced by his farm.

The conflict escalated when the U.S. Department of Justice, at the USDA's behest, initiated legal proceedings against him, as reported by journalist David Gumpert.

Miller first became aware of the USDA's concerns in November 2015 while attending a conference hosted by the Weston A. Price Foundation, where he temporarily stored his raw milk products in hotel coolers.

RFK Jr. and Brian Hooker's
New Book: "Vax-Unvax"
ORDER NOW

In an unrelated event, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) identified two cases of listeriosis, attributing them to products from Miller's Organic Farm.

By 2016, the court authorized armed law enforcement officers to accompany USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) investigators during inspections of Miller's home and farm, despite his status as an Amish pacifist.

During these investigations, the USDA demanded food purchase records dating back to 2012 from Miller, who refused, citing contractual obligations to maintain the privacy of such information, Gumpert reported.

While Miller assumed the investigation stemmed from the CDC's report on listeriosis, it was actually launched by the National Organic Program within the USDA in March 2015, predating the CDC's identification of the listeria "outbreak" linked to Miller's farm.

In 2022, Miller continued to face ongoing scrutiny from the USDA, including another visit by armed federal employees to his farm in Pennsylvania.

The government attempted to issue hundreds of thousands of dollars in fines, which would essentially put the farm out of business.

Rebel News called the court-ordered armed threat "an attack on Amish religious freedom just 150 miles from Washington, D.C."

Farm raid declared 'patently illegal'

The January raid stems from accusations from Michigan and New York states' departments of health, which suggested two E. coli illnesses originated from Miller's raw milk or raw milk products.

As reported by Food Safety News:

> "This time, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture executed a duly issued search warrant on Amos Miller and Miller's Organic Farm.
>
> "The state's responsibility was to determine if raw eggnog and other unpasteurized, raw dairy products produced by Miller were responsible for positive Shiga toxin-producing E. Coli tests in Michigan and New York, causing human illnesses. It is against federal law to sell raw milk and raw dairy products across state lines.

Pennsylvania state police came along for the raid with state agricultural officials. The raid comes on the heels of federal litigation against Miller that resulted in a Third Consent Decree.

That order prohibits Miller from "conducting livestock/poultry slaughter and processing" intended for sale, resale, offer for sale, transportation, donation, or distribution to his "customers or elsewhere," according to Food Safety News.

The Decree also grants the FSIS access to Miller's properties. But, according to Miller's attorney, Robert Barnes, the way the raid was conducted was illegal:

> "The Department of Agriculture of the State of Pennsylvania suddenly came, without notice, raided Amos' farm, and detained everything Amos had in the farm's freezer.
>
> "They did so in a lawless manner, without appropriate authority, in violation of their own rules and regulations, despite never objecting to the prior resolutions reached with the federal government, and despite a complete failure by the state to even reach out to Amos' known counsel, Robert Barnes.
>
> "The state's rules require advance notice, reasonable time frames for inspections, and a showing of credentials, none of which occurred here.
>
> "Instead, the state unlawfully obtained a search warrant based on materially false statements in an affidavit by a high-ranking state official in an agency with a known grievance against independent farmers like Amos, and, after the raid and finding no evidence of wrongdoing, then illegally ordered detained every item of food in one of Amos Miller's coolers, including buffalo meat not even subject to federal regulation.
>
> "The detention order is patently illegal under Pennsylvania law. Despite the constant harassment, Amos will continue to do all he legally can to provide the food his members deeply need. Amos thanks you for your continued support at this critical time for food freedom in America."

Raw milk has long been symbolic of food freedom

For millennia, humans have consumed "raw" milk, also referred to as fresh milk, as it was the sole type of milk available.

However, accessing raw milk has become increasingly challenging for Americans in numerous states, requiring them to navigate various obstacles to procure this natural and nutritious food.

The decision to sell, purchase and consume raw milk should rest with the individual rather than being dictated by state or federal authorities. Nevertheless, Big Dairy has effectively restricted access to raw milk for many Americans who seek it.

Despite assertions by health departments, the underlying motive behind these restrictions is financial gain, rather than genuine concern for public health and safety.

A Campaign for Real Milk outlined the stark difference in income for farmers selling conventional, pasteurized milk compared to those selling raw milk — and it's easy to see why Big Dairy wants to keep this under wraps.

A conventional dairy farmer may receive about $16 per hundredweight — or per 100 pounds, which keeps him and his family in near poverty.

In contrast, a farmer selling raw, grass-fed dairy directly to consumers will have a very different outcome — one that allows him to thrive while selling a superior, healthier product to his customers.

But as Miller's case demonstrates, if farmers sell raw milk to consumers in states where it's not allowed, they can face armed raids on their farms or be slapped with fines and jail time.

Raw milk undeniably serves as a nutrient-rich food, boasting essential nutrients, fats, anti-inflammatory properties, beneficial enzymes, probiotics and additional health-promoting components.

Its consumption has been associated with a decreased prevalence of asthma, allergies, eczema and respiratory infections.

Regardless of your stance on raw milk, whether fully embracing it as a whole food or holding reservations, the fundamental principle remains: individuals should possess the right to produce and distribute it, along with other whole foods, to consenting adults seeking to purchase them.

Your support helps fund this work, and CHD's related advocacy, education and scientific research.
DONATE NOW

Farmers facing persecution worldwide

Why are governments so intent on targeting small operators of food clubs delivering farm-fresh foods to local residents?

As long as farmers are prevented from selling to consumers directly, processors can and do price-fix the market, ultimately leading to the intentional destruction of small, family dairy farms and consolidation of concentrated animal feeding operations, or CAFO dairy farms using taxpayer-funded subsidies.

This isn't only an issue in the U.S., however. Many Dutch farmers are facing the loss of their farms over controversial nitrogen rules.

The Dutch government claims it needs to nationalize half of cattle farmers' land — an amount equal to about one-third of Holland — to reduce nitrogen, but experts say this plan is seriously flawed.

Just like cracking down on an Amish farmer providing wholesome food to their neighbors, seizing control of farmland consolidates resources into the hands of a powerful few. And once you control the food supply, you control the population. But there's hope on the horizon.

Support Amos Miller and other small farmers

If you believe in the right to access unadulterated, traditional food, this is a practical and powerful way to voice that belief and help invoke change.

Miller and other farmers are also targeted via oppressive meat processing regulations, which is why supporting the Processing Revival and Intrastate Meat Exemption, or PRIME Act is another way to fight for food freedom.

Under current government regulations, the USDA, not individual states, has control over how meat is processed. Small livestock producers are forced to drive long distances to have their animals slaughtered at slaughterhouses that meet federal inspection standards.

Small, custom slaughterhouses are not permitted to sell any of their meat to grocery stores, schools or restaurants.

The PRIME Act, introduced by Rep. Thomas Massie (R-Ky.), would allow farmers to sell meat processed at these smaller slaughtering facilities and allow states to set their own meat processing standards.

Because small slaughterhouses do not have an inspector on staff — a requirement that only large facilities can easily fulfill — they're banned from selling their meat.

The PRIME Act would lift this regulation without sacrificing safety, as random USDA inspections could still occur.

The act would make meat much more affordable and available while protecting the livelihoods of small farmers like Miller.

Ultimately, the solution to ensuring food safety and security resides within a decentralized food system that fosters connections between communities and farmers who cultivate genuine, sustainably-grown food and distribute it locally.

Originally published by Mercola.

The views and opinions expressed in this article are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the views of Children's Health Defense.

Subscribe to The Defender – It's Free!
First Name.. Last Name.. Email.. SIGN UP

SUGGEST A CORRECTION

Dr. Joseph Mercola
Dr. Joseph Mercola is the founder of Mercola.com.

Sign up for free news and updates from Children's Health Defense. CHD focuses on legal strategies to defend the health of our children and obtain justice for those injured. We can't do it without your support.

Republishing Guidelines

Children's Health Defense Comment Policy
We welcome relevant and respectful comments. Off-topic comments may be removed.
Please read our Comment Policy before commenting.
Got it

90 Comments Login ▼

Join the discussion…
LOG IN WITH OR SIGN UP WITH DISQUS ?
Name

♡ 1 • Share Best Newest Oldest

holisticpoet
2 months ago
This is war being waged against the people by a rouge government. There was no one injured and there was a private contract between buyer and seller. The government is just angry that people have the audacity to business without then being involved. In other words,if you do not play by the governments' rules, you will not be allowed to play at all. Just because the quality of food is substantially higher than what the government allows, Amos must be eliminated to protect our low standard food producers. What a backwards world.
37 0 Reply

Ricky Ricardo → holisticpoet
2 months ago
Right idea; but I don't think the gooberment is "red". It is "rogue". ;)
3 1 Reply

Beatrice → Ricky Ricardo
2 months ago
Maybe rouge is more accurate. Isn't red communist?
6 0 Reply

Greebo → Beatrice
2 months ago
And has been infiltrated & hijacked to overthrow the government OF & FOR the people. Perhaps that is why it does not follow or Constitution, Bill of Rights & Represents the interests of our enemies instead to the American people?
2 0 Reply

Beatrice → Greebo
2 months ago
PS...and on the topic of a hijacked red government, I have no doubt that the US is planning to harmonize with the CCP at some point. Why else would we be doing so much business with them if they were considered evil. I know that our elected officials will disagree with me as they are always warning about how our companies and US dollar are at risk and in danger due to China but why is our own government strategically implementing communist infrastructure like mass surveillance, digital currencies, draconian mandates that make no sense whatsoever and more? Why are we allowing China to buy up land, farms and infrastructure in our country? Why are so many Chinese military age men and women crossing the border? Nothing makes sense anymore. No need to have grown up in the 60's and tripped with Alice to have a psychedelic experience.
1 0 Reply

SuziAlkamyst → Beatrice
2 months ago
'They' did business with the USSR back when it existed...Business knows no national boundaries and there's nothing 'Personal' about it except profit!
1 0 Reply

Beatrice → SuziAlkamyst
2 months ago
I call it a lack of integrity and enormous hypocrisy. Quit telling us how bad dictatorships are and claiming that we need war to restore democracy around the world while supporting and empowering them. "Communism is good as long as it's not affecting my bottom line." Reminds me of the woke who claim to be so ' anti-slavery' yet tear down historical statues while wearing clothing made by slaves in other countries.
0 0 Reply

Beatrice → Greebo
2 months ago
Yesterday I went to my local voting station to get the sample ballots for our primary election. RFK, Jr. was not on the ballot and Ramaswamy was. I thought Ramaswamy dropped out???? Biden was on the ballot with Williamson and the other man named Dean. Is there any rhyme or reason to our elections anymore? " For the People..." ......Ridiculous!!!
1 0 Reply

SuziAlkamyst → holisticpoet
2 months ago
It's a would be Dictatorship/Fascism/Neo-Feudalism desired by a few overly rich billionaires and massive corporations...As Mussolini said once upon a time 'When government and business get together you have Fascism'...you can call it communism if you want, but which ever, it's a Dictatorship for which these idiots are aiming, who cannot see the wood for the trees, making life more dangerous for themselves as well as life on earth, just like the war mongers and arms industry. How utterly stupid to keep repeating the same recipe of making people fearful and using coercion to control them...looks to me like they're petrified of loosing 'control' control freaks that they are. If they had any intelligence at play and cast aside their fear of loss, they might see there are better paths they could take, that wouldn't make them more vulnerable, but I suppose when one is mentally ill, one doesn't easily see the cure within oneself.
0 0 Reply

Screwdriver → holisticpoet
2 months ago
Some reading about why these laws were passed would clear things up for you. It is definitely true that millions of people consume raw milk with zero negative effects, it is also true that many thousands have got sick and many have died from bacteria in raw milk. If you look at the events that led to these types of laws, it's easy to understand why they were enacted. Most of them were a direct result of public anger after a mass casualty event caused by bad products.
0 4 Reply

Benj Clarke → Screwdriver
2 months ago
Mass casualty event? Let's unpack that!

The inception of Louis Pasteur's pasteurization process was in NY, the local booze distillery was saving money by feeding their milk cows the leftover grain mash from the distilling process, which the cows consumed happily enough, but it was not nutritionally sustainable and the cows began to get sick. People were getting sick drinking milk from sick cows! So they stumbled upon pasteurization (which was intended for use with beer, but milk became the primary product), and then the sellers were able to continue to sell dirty milk, by killing the germs.

A well-kept cow, happy and healthy, produces raw milk that is nutritionally superior and tastes wayyyyy better.

Readers Digest in 1946 (I think) published a propaganda piece about "the dangers of raw milk" that caught everyone up in a frenzy of fear about it. That is specifically how all the regulations against raw milk sales originated. From some govt-adjacent psyop bullshit propaganda. Just like they did with marijuana.
1 0 Reply

Greebo → Screwdriver
2 months ago
NO one heeds to consume raw milk as there is plenty of the processed milk in all groceries. The raw milk is a specialty item that must be searched out & deliberately purchased.
It is a CHOICE for informed citizens, & less likely to be "bad" than the mass produced dairy products that are full of untested chemicals & multiple handling procedures.
1 0 Reply

Beatrice → Greebo
2 months ago
Good point about not needing to consume raw milk, It is indeed a specialty item for most and we should have the choice to consume it. It's almost insane that any regulatory body that claims to be protecting us from dangerous food items would go after a small milk farmer given how they allow all the mega corps to produce foods that aren't safe or healthy for any living creature and cause the epidemic of metabolic disorders and diseases in our country.

I used to buy the ultra pasteurized grass fed milk until it dawned on me (duh!) that grassfed means nothing after pasteurization. Pasteurization kills all the beneficial nutrients. So, for me, raw milk is the best option if I'm going to drink it at all. There is a local farm that uses low pasteurization methods which I suppose is much better than the ultra others if one must purchase milk.
2 0 Reply

Sandra S → Screwdriver
2 months ago
"Mass casualty event"? Reference? Enough histrionics.
1 0 Reply

tony
2 months ago
Geatapo tactics 1939 all over again. He who controls the food, controls the World 🌍
29 0 Reply

Greebo → tony
2 months ago
And the water, medicine, & energy for all modern life (fossil fuels). All are being grasped by one particular Party which has become more like a Marxist Party than it had been previously.
0 0 Reply

Joan Esclamado
2 months ago
I have been very appreciative of the right to buy Raw Kefir and raw cheese for some time!! I cannot conceive of how the FDA has that kind of power. But actually it is not surprising, and people need to become aware of the meaning of I DO NOT CONSENT. Many still do not understand the value of freedom and our gift of will power. WAKE UP WORLD!!!
22 0 Reply

BChristine
2 months ago
I have visited nearby farms in this area - merely a few minutes away from Amos Millers farm. I am concerned about them as well. Although I'm not sure why his farm has been so targeted. There is also a Miller's Biological Farm in Quarryville PA, about 20 min away (no relation as far as I know).

I wish the 'authorities' would just leave these Amish Farms alone! They are peaceful, beautiful and provide quality whole food to so many. The USDA and other 'authorities' need to focus their efforts on cleaning up the big corporations who peddle toxic (so-called) food instead.
17 0 Reply

Beatrice → BChristine
2 months ago
The gestapo has been harassing Amish farmers in VA as well. I'm not purchasing goods at the grocery any longer. I only purchase from local farms and mom and pop businesses. The USDA and other authorities care nothing about human health and safety. As you point out, they don't care about the junk (they call food) that we eat or the toxic water or air. Safety recalls are months after thousands have been killed or poisoned. Another waste of tax dollars.
11 0 Reply

guest → Beatrice
2 months ago
If you've ever had to deal with the USDA inspectors, you would have great sympathy for the small business owners. They are tyrants with power and get big feeling using it.
6 0 Reply

Beatrice → guest
2 months ago
Not sure I understand your response to my comment.

I just had my annual inspection with the Dept. Of Ag. Passed with flying colors but does that actually mean anything? Not really. They give us several weeks notice to get into compliance and then they show up. I used to work with the EPA doing compliance monitoring and that was a joke too.
2 0 Reply

guest → Beatrice
2 months ago
As a small business owner in the meat business I had to deal at the local level with "big feeling" inspectors that did "Surprise" inspections and threatened to close me down time and time again. How we handled EMPTY boxes of chicken, is an example. Didn't effect the meat or the quality of service to customers...the darn boxes were wet with ice and drippings and put outside for trash pickup.
2 0 Reply

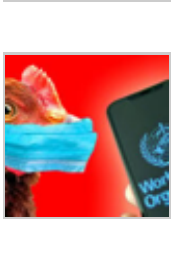
Beatrice → guest
2 months ago
Oh yes, I'm aware. I used to work in restaurants and I know all

Donate Now
You make the difference.

Latest News

Did the WHO Water Down Its 'Pandemic Treaty'? Not Really, Experts Say

'A Dangerous Vaccine for a Nothing Disease': U.S. Stockpiling Bird Flu Vaccines



WHO, Media Drum Up Fear of Bird Flu Spreading to Humans

MORE NEWS

Latest Views

How What You Eat May Change Your Unborn Children's Genes — and Affect Their Health

'Corporate Greed' to Blame for Soaring Food Prices, FTC Report Says

Australia's Public Broadcaster Partners With Trusted News Initiative to 'Protect Public' From 'Misinformation'

MORE VIEWS

Get FREE News & Updates!
First Name..
Last Name..
Email..
SIGN UP

Get Text Alerts
Sign up for breaking news from The Defender
123-456-7890
REQUIRED. Phone number must be in a standard 10-digit format: 1234567890 or 123-456-7890 about those inspections. I'm concerned because the inspector who has worked with me for over 20 years is retiring this year and a new power hungry youngin is replacing him AND it's a woman. Wish that didn't sound sexist but I'm a woman and I know all about how some women are too despotic as a means to over-compensate for their insecurities.

4 0 Reply

Jane → BChristine
2 months ago

But that would not make their overlords happy, and they'll lose their job. We all need to get more cows, and make our own milk and cheese. If we all own a cow, then we can say it is milk from my own cow,….I'm not selling milk to anyone. Buy Millers cows. Pay them for maintaining your cow, which involves milking it. Then no one has to pay for raw milk.

6 0 Reply

GlomOnToMe → Jane
2 months ago

We've gotten around it where I live by buying raw milk for "pet consumption" only. Of course WE would never consume something that hasn't undergone rigorous scrutiny from such valuable agencies like the FDA and USDA, who of course have OUR best interests in mind.

4 0 Reply

Beatrice → Jane
2 months ago

Brilliant idea! In VA, we get raw milk through herd shares. I wonder how long that will last?

3 0 Reply

Beatrice → BChristine
2 months ago

What's the story about the Amish pregnant woman who was murdered this week? Do you know?

0 0 Reply

BChristine → Beatrice
2 months ago

Hi Beatrice ... Spartansburg PA where this happened is about 5 hours North of the Lancaster PA Amish country where Millers farm is. Such a horrible and very rare event in any peaceful Amish country. This was actually much closer to where I grew up in Ohio.
They are still investigating, but how traumatic for the community.

1 0 Reply

Beatrice → BChristine
2 months ago

I get the feeling they are looking at the husband as a suspect? Makes me very skeptical if that is true. The media made some comment about how being pregnant puts women at the most risk of domestic homicide and that angered me since that only applies to abusive relationships/marriages.

0 0 Reply

Elizabeth Healey-Hammack
2 months ago

This has to be stopped the Government has surpassed its intended use

15 0 Reply

Benj Clarke → Elizabeth Healey-Hammack
2 months ago

Big time.

0 0 Reply

Jane
2 months ago

They have killed many thousands more with their vaccines, flu shots, remdesivir, and ventilators, than Miller s farm can ever make sick in thousands of years.
Obviously a ploy to degrade further our food and lives for their human genocide.

11 0 Reply

cjae
2 months ago

430+ unconstitutional government agencies need to be abolished. It would definitely cut the deficit .
U.S. Department of Agriculture Is Developing a Vaccine for a Virus It's Already Making More Infectious and Deadly with Gain-of-Function Experiments https://jonfleetwood.substa...

11 0 Reply

Beatrice → cjae
a month ago

Ramaswamy would agree and he had plans to abolish many bureaucratic bs depts.

0 0 Reply

Jane → cjae
2 months ago

Hey make a list.

0 0 Reply

Ricky Ricardo
2 months ago

The evil criminal cartel want us all eating lab-grown frankencrap and bugs!!!

10 0 Reply

Carol C
2 months ago

This country is being run by Nazi Communists

10 0 Reply

Jeanette Johnson → Carol C
2 months ago

Under the disguise of democrat.

9 0 Reply

Beatrice → Carol C
2 months ago

Literally! This is really frightening and depressing.

2 0 Reply

Kim from Brooklyn
2 months ago

Every day, every minute there is something to rear its ugly head. It's out of control for sure. And as much as it is horrible, I wonder how many people are actually doing EVEN ONE THING differently then before we knew all of this?

It's one thing to spread bad news, it's another to sit back and expect the world to change when we are not doing anything to change it.

Who on this board can say they have done something significantly different to change the ugliness?

I will start.

When my contract expires for my cell, I am cancelling it. No more cell phone. One less bill. One less 5G radiated device in my home..

Next........

5 0 Reply

Beatrice → Kim from Brooklyn
2 months ago

Thank you Kim. You and I share the same passion and willingness to discipline ourselves to create a different future for all of us. I really wish that more people would get on board with us but look at how many people respond to your post. I have noticed that when I post about getting off social media or getting off devices, very few if any respond. Avoidance? Guilt? Shame? Technology has done nothing good for humanity that humans could not have achieved by themselves in time and frankly, better. Just look at the news about mental health, perverts online, digital related crimes and murders, how corporations are abusing the digital platforms to scam people and 'accidentally' steal or "borrow" their money. It's all evil to me. I want to live with peace of mind the way I used to - even during difficult times!

For over a month, I've not shopped at a grocery store and only purchase from local farmers and crafters and artisans. I'm finding all sorts of creative ways to make soap, cleaners and I don't use paper towels now which eliminates having to visit the grocery. I'm sure I will have to purchase shampoo online since I can't get it locally and my hair MUST have this particular shampoo but that's about the only thing that is a must for me. I have a mobile phone but I don't use it and it doesn't have a SIM card in it. I have it for emergencies only. I pay about 12 dollars a month and can cancel at any time (I use Ting) but when my phone battery dies (in the next few months) I will get a burner phone with minutes that one purchases that never expire. That way it's always there for emergencies. Plus, I heard an FBI agent teach about how to purchase a burner phone like tracphone and he said that for maximum privacy, get the store to activate it and you choose an area code that is not your own.

XXOO

2 0 Reply

Yaron Nahum
2 months ago

Unbelievable, this is an assault on freedom. This has nothing to do with public health concern. This is why they want to eliminate any ability to grow healthy organic food and to have us only eat processed poison, drink fluoride, get vaccinated, affirm our sexual orientation, drive electric cars, sacrifice energy for global warming scam, get consumed by social media, get EMF exposure, invent ongoing world crisis like wars and scamdemics. Get rid of religion for a new form of scientism. When do people wake up and realize this is not left and right issues, this is attack on humanity.

5 0 Reply

Beatrice → Yaron Nahum
2 months ago

Amen. It's a spiritual crisis where evil (and I mean, literally) has gained control over the masses by psychologically and intellectually weakening people with technology, psychotropic medications, immoral and perverted temptations, unhealthy foods, etc... The lack of discipline observed in so many today is the result of using too much technology that was designed to lure a person in with unnecessary and novel conveniences that would anesthetize the frontal cortex of the brain that controls impulsive behavior and puts the breaks on. Psychotropic drugs like SSRIs and sugar have that same effect on the brain leaving the patient with little to no discipline in or agency over one's life. The person will then become the victim - completely dependent on the system. There is no freedom for any of us if we are not assuming total responsibility over our own life.

M.Scott Peck once said that discipline is the only protection we have from evil. When we teach ourselves and our children discipline, we are teaching them and ourselves how to suffer with resiliency and how to grow and accrue wisdom. Discipline is the basic set of tools that we need to solve life's problems through discernment and our values.

2 0 Reply

Joey Dee
2 months ago edited

What they really want after they destroy his business and he has no customers, they will find a way to steal his FARM AND ALL THE LAND!

4 0 Reply

realbluebaby
2 months ago

RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION PERSONAFIED! TAKE IT TO THE US SUPREME COURT!

4 0 Reply

lakewoodsteve
2 months ago

Hormone & antibiotic laced milk, homogenized in a blast furnace to kill all nutrient value, is what keeps the BIG milk industrial complex up & running! Like the Mob, Big Milk has Department of Agriculture for infocers! Paid for by us suckers! Wouldn't a prop 60 style warning be good enough for the Big milk cartel? Or do they just want them out of competition, Mob style?

4 0 Reply

Frederick Lee
2 months ago

First, the political powers have ulterior motives: Make no mistake, somebody wants his property. They don't care about two listeria/e coli cases in Michigan or New York.
Second, the federal law against transporting unpasteurized milk was passed in 1987. Which means that somehow, before refrigeration was affordable and prevalent, before scientific food tests were simplified, before food labeling could be researched and was more accurate and transparent, many people were lucky to be alive after consuming non-pasteurized milk. Then, after 1987, with passage of the law prohibiting unpasteurized milk from being transported across state lines (shall we call this period the Prohibition?), society as a whole no longer needed to worry about illness triggered from unpasteurized milk.
The judges, both state and federal, can do the right thing and declare the law un-Constitutional because it addresses a problem that does not exist. Instead, with this raid, it is used to abuse and coerce people that are not politically connected, such as the defendant.
And, Pennsylvania is the state that gave us insight into how corrupted judges and politicians can thrive, (for example:
https://caselaw.findlaw.com...) that it will be a long time before any form of justice comes out of that state.

3 0 Reply

Beatrice → Frederick Lee
2 months ago

We need to compile a list of suspicious incidents that are driving people from their homes and land and take notice of the land or industries surrounding them in some cases. They are using personal property taxes (inflated) to break people into bankruptcy, developers are paying counties and cities to annex entire neighborhoods to force homeowners to sell so that Goliath (google) and Amz can build their enormous cloud centers, insurers are denying further coverage and pulling out of states, destructive storms and fires that seem suspicious and man made or generated (haarp), homes have been extremely overvalued and the interest rate is absurd. I'm sure there are even more tactics being used. None of us is safe no matter where we live or whether we own or rent.

3 0 Reply

Millicent Fenwick → Beatrice
2 months ago

New York State is currently drafting a "bipartisan" bill to prep for the "next pandemic." Included in the strategies is the possibility of "culling specific species of animals that could spread viruses to humans."
Notwithstanding the slaughter of tens of millions of chickens last year and other livestock in recent times, just imagine if some virus "expert" says that your family dog or cat is somehow a vector for spreading disease and needs to be destroyed!

Embedded in the url below is a link to the actual proposed document. Scary times are ahead unless people STOP COMPLYING!

https://news.yahoo.com/next...

2 0 Reply

Beatrice → Millicent Fenwick
2 months ago

Hi Millicent. I hear you loud and clear and am very aware of what our so very bleak future looks like. Watch Jordan Peterson's testimony to a congressional committee yesterday. Horrifying, depressing and frankly, leaves me feeling empty of words and hope.

SO, the WEF doesn't want us to have pets at all. If you saw the footage of the CCP bagging up the domestic pets and leaving them on the street until they were shot and killed, then you were looking at the blueprint of our future. Anyone who thinks that the CCP/PRC isn't the blueprint for our future is being naive or in denial. The pet foods and medications that vets are giving our pets are killing them. My dog passed in December and I'm afraid to rescue another one because I fear going to a vet in the same way I fear going to a human doctor. Everyone needs to get off their devices and return to a more mechanical /analog lifestyle as much as possible. I can't sound that warning loud enough!!!!!

1 0 Reply

Load more comments

Subscribe Privacy Do Not Sell My Data

THE DEFENDER IS AVAILABLE IN:

ENGLISH SPANISH PORTUGUESE GERMAN ITALIAN FRENCH

Children's Health Defense®

Children's Health Defense® is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Our mission is to end childhood health epidemics by working aggressively to eliminate harmful exposures, hold those responsible accountable and establish safeguards to prevent future harm. We fight corruption, mass surveillance and censorship that put profits before people as well as advocate for worldwide rights to health freedom and bodily autonomy.

TAKE ACTION

DONATE FREE SIGN-UP BECOME A MEMBER

Donations are tax deductible to the full extent of the law. EIN #26-0388604

© 2016 - 2024 Children's Health Defense® • All Rights Reserved • Sitemap